THE UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA STAFF BULLETIN

EDMONTON, ALBERTA

NOVEMBER 9, 1972

The University has filed a brief with the City of Edmonton, in response to the city's general transportation plan. Included in the submission are recommendations that a system of bypass roads be established to keep non-University traffic off the campus, and that many of the streets in the University area be incorporated into a one-way traffic system to facilitate the flow of traffic. Under the proposed system (ABOVE) the University is considering completing the lane east of the General Services Building, making it one-way northbound, and joining it up with a short section of two-way traffic at the intersection of 116 Street and Saskatchewan Drive. There also would be two-way traffic on 116 Street between 87 and 89 Avenues.

UNIVERSITY SUBMITS BRIEF TO CITY TRANSPORT HEARINGS

The University of Alberta's official response to the City of Edmonton's position paper on the general transportation plan has been submitted for discussion at the transport hearings to be held November 20-22. The submission carries the approval of the Campus Development Committee and the Board of Governors.

In the report, the University points out that "the size and nature of the population in the University area pose special transportation problems which require special attention." The report says the present daytime population of 35,000 is expected to reach 50,000 within 10 years. For this reason, "The University of Alberta feels that it must be concerned with the planning of transportation facilities." While the University does not intend to provide an unlimited amount of parking space, it does realize that additional parking spaces may be needed in the future and has already begun to plan structures to handle the increase. These new structures would be located on the perimeter of the campus, in an effort to decrease the number of automobiles on the campus interior. The report also requests that developers in areas adjacent to the University be required to provide adequate parking within their own facilities.

The submission states that "the University supports the proposal for the provision of ring and penetrator roads, and suggests in particular that bypass alternate routes be provided to reduce the amount of non-University traffic through the University area." In a drawing accompanying the submission, the University sets out what it considers a desirable traffic bypass route. From west to east, the route covers Groat Road, University Avenue, 82 Avenue, and 109 Street. For access to the campus, they have suggested a system of one-way streets which link up to the ring roads (see map). They point out that they are opposed "to any proposed upgrading of the whole of 87 Avenue as an arterial road through the campus proper."

The report also states that the University views rapid transit as "a long-term solution to some transportation problems, but . . . there is need for the development of a balanced transportation system." The planning and construction of new buildings on the campus have been based on the possibility of an underground rapid transit corridor through the University area. The submission points out that recent efforts by the Edmonton Transit System (ETS) to upgrade their service to the campus have resulted in an increase of ETS users and a corresponding levelling off of automobile users. It adds that further improvements could be achieved by reserving separate lanes for public transit vehicles, and by providing comfortable bus shelters and additional direct-service routes. The University cautions, however, that adequate roadways must also be provided for automobile traffic.

In the University area, there are "particular problems . . . which require urgent attention," namely, upgrading of roads and intersections. Some improvements could be achieved, says the submission, by upgrading traffic signals, establishing one-way streets, marking traffic lanes, and eliminating on-street parking. The University suggests improving the 114 Street system from University Avenue to points beyond the 72 Avenue traffic circle, the 114 Street and University Avenue intersection, and the Emily Murphy Road and 116 Street intersection.

It also requests that Saskatchewan Drive between 116 Street and 110 Street be left as is for the present, and that ultimately that portion be closed and developed as a landscaped area.

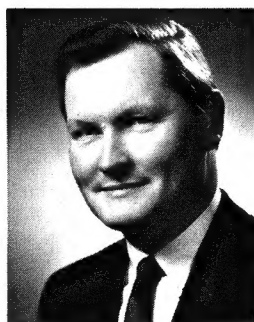

One portion of the city's transport paper suggested that a new street be cut through the University Parkland Farm at approximately 61 Avenue, from 115 Street to 122 Street. "Such a road," says the submission from the University, "would cause serious disruption to the farm activity and would appear to provide negligible improvements to traffic capacity. The University of Alberta is not agreeable to construction of such a road and would ask that reference to this road be removed from any further planning documents."

The submission closes with a reaffirmation of the University's desire to continue working with the city in an effort to identify and resolve matters of mutual concern, saying that the solutions arrived at by the City/University Liaison Committee "have unquestionably been more satisfactory than would have been possible had the decisions been arrived at in isolation."
